“Chris and I were deeply saddened to hear of Helen's passing. Although I know she is in a better place, probably making a funny comment that I am sure has everyone smiling, she still will be greatly, greatly, missed. I'm so glad I got to see her with Chris and the kids at Christmas. As always, she was smiling, even though she probably didn't feel well. Despite this, she was funny and lovable as always. Never a dull moment. Never. I cherish all the times we spent together and all the laughs we had. She loved me and she knew I loved her. That was all that mattered. There is no denying it, she was special. I can't help feel that another piece of me left this world Monday. A good, special, loving piece. However, although gone, I know it still resonates within me. It always will, till I see her smiling at me, once again on that appointed day. Till then I know she will keep them laughing...and she'll be waiting on me when I get there.

Our thoughts and prayers are with you. We love ya, John, Chris and the kids.
